NOT GROUND FOR DIVORCE

Birmingham, England.- Although Walter A. Simpson, 52, and his wife, Daisy, also 52, have not spoken a word to each other for four years since an argument over "a few shillings," the judge refused to grant them a divorce. He held there was neither desertion nor cruelty "except for this general conspiracy of silence which seems common to both parties."

GOOD LIGHTING IMPROVES READING

Good lighting can make reading a pleasure.

The Virginia Farm and Home Electrification Council says with good lighting you will find it easier to concentrate and your eyes will not tire. A floor lamp can furnish the proper lighting if it is the right type of lamp, and is properly placed.

The Council says the stem of the floor lamp should be placed about 10 inches behind your shoulder near the corner of the chair. Another method of placing the floor lamp is to sit in the chair as you would when reading a book, measure 15 inches left or right of book center, then back 26 inches.

The lamp shade is important when selecting a lamp. The lamp should be constructed so that the bottom of the shade is 47 inches from the floor. The shade should be a minimum of 10 inches in diameter for the top, 10 inches deep, and 18 inches in diameter for the bottom.

Lamp shades may be made from various materials. Regardless of material, the bulb should not show a glare through the shade. An opaque shade is best if a bright or dark color is desired, or if a lamp is to be placed against a dark wall. Be sure the inside of the shade is white.

For the lamp to give a good quality of light, it must have a diffuser. There are two types of diffusers — the CLM glass diffuser, and the bowl-shaped glass diffuser. The CLM diffuser is considered the best, but the bowl-shaped diffuser will give good quality light. The diffuser should have a 10-inch top diameter.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By E. H. Sims

In what direction does a tornado usually travel? How fast does it move and why does it sometimes skip from place to place over the face of the earth?

Most of the experts agree that tornadoes usually form along a line squall, traveling in an easterly direction. They often move as slowly as a frontal system, just twenty or thirty miles an hour, though the whirling of the circular winds may measure up to 100 m.p.h or more.

Therefore, as a general rule, if you are west of a suddenly sighted tornado funnel, chances are it won't pass over you.

Because the tornado forms from a low cloud, it touches the earth only when it extends far enough to come in contact with the land below. Winds in the area are usually highly erratic and may shift the height of the cloud frequently, thus moving the end of the funnel up and down, causing it to skip about the countryside, coming to earth at various places, miles apart.

As far as is known, a motorist in a modern car can always outrun a tornado if he can drive directly away from the funnel, even if it is traveling the same course behind him. A speed of sixty or seventy miles an hour might be required.
